Identity theft occurs when someone possesses or uses your name, address, Social Security number (SSN), bank or credit card account number, or other identifying information without your knowledge with the intent to commit fraud or other crimes. These days, it is almost impossible to be in business and not collect or hold personally identifying information – names and addresses, Social Security numbers, credit card numbers, or other account numbers – about your customers, employees, business partners, students, or patients. If this information falls into the wrong hands, it could put these individuals at risk for identity theft.
